Become an effective IATF 16949 auditor

In an age when cost down initiatives is making it more and more difficult to release employees to attend expensive time consuming face to face training, Quality Partner has developed an alternative approach to train IATF management system, manufacturing process or product auditors.

Paul Hardiman, one of the most experienced and globally recognised experts in the field of auditing automotive quality management systems has produced a series of online training videos and exams on the audit process including system, manufacturing process and product audits. The training is based on the internationally recognised ISO19011.

Each module is approximately 15 minutes long and includes practical tips and advice in undertaking effective audits incorporating risk based thinking.

The general auditing series includes:

Introduction to IATF 16949: 2016
This module gives delegates an understanding of how IATF 16949 was developed, the structure and the focus on the process approach incorporating risk based thinking.

Undertaking effective IATF 16949 management system audits
This module gives delegates an understanding of how to plan, undertake and report the findings from an IATF 16949 quality management system audit against the requirements of IATF 16949, using the process approach incorporating risk based thinking.

Undertaking effective IATF 16949 manufacturing process audits
This module gives delegates an understanding of how to to plan, undertake and report findings from an IATF 16949 manufacturing process audit, including the PFMEA and control plan.

Undertaking effective IATF 16949 product audits
This module gives delegates an understanding of how to plan, undertake and report findings from an IATF 16949 product audit.

Unless delegates have previous audit experience, it is recommended that prior to delegates taking these modules, that they follow the full series of modules on the auditing process produced by Quality Partner, at their own pace, before starting these IATF 16949 modules.

Each of the above videos is also supported by an online exam.

Delegates completing the exam and achieving 80% or more will receive an automatically generated certificate of competence.
